I have had visual problems that made it a little difficult for me to continue, thus no newsletters were published. Things are finally getting better and I hope to pick up where we left off. BUT...I would still like to find a new editor who can bring in new ideas, new format/ etc. This is your organization and your input is appreciated. Bev

GERMAN WORD OF THE MONTH... Fingerspitzengefühl

Compound nouns abound in the German language. One that applies well to a variety of scenarios yet is difficult to translate precisely into English is "Fingerspitzengefühl."

The literal translation of this expression - often used to connote someone who deftly handles all manner of tricky social situations, accurately assesses various signs of the times, or cleverly strategizes solutions in a range of contexts - is "finger tip feeling." Most German native speakers would use it to positively describe an individual or his or her actions.

In terms of traditional handicrafts or trades such as watchmaking, wood carving or hairdressing, the expression Fingerspitzengefühl, may also be taken literally - namely as someone showing fine dexterity with their hands, or excellent "finger tip feeling."...

Our Future is in Your Hands!

If we could look into the future, what would we see? Will we see families sharing the traditions of their ancestral ties? Will we see families proudly proclaiming their ethnic roots or will they become a part of the melting pot...forgetting all that was so important to the family that left Germany for a better life in America? Oh they may be there for the brats & beer festivals, but what will they pass on to their children and or grandchildren.

It is no secret that ethnic organizations are beginning to fade from the scene and among them many German societies that have been around even longer than DANK! We have watched various German choruses disband for lack of member/singers; Turnvereins have closed as well. How long can we stand by and watch our heritage disappear?

If you are proud of your heritage, now is the time to stand-up and get involved in maintaining this organization to be here for the next generation. Now is the time for you to get involved by becoming actively involved within your chapter and by your financial support.

DANK was organized by German immigrants who came for a better life, who banded together as they became naturalized citizens of the country they adopted and to share their culture, and to preserve the language, traditions and music they held dear from the 'Heimat'. Many Germans worked hard in various organizations to raise money to help one another through their "Kranken" funds ... basically the early forerunner of health insurance... money that was used to keep food on the table when 'Papa' couldn't work because he was sick or hurt at work. The ladies raised money for the organizations (today's auxiliaries) to build the halls where they could meet. They worked together for a common cause united by their heritage.

Somewhere along the line, we have become so sure of ourselves that not until its too late do we realize what is at stake—what we are losing.

Is your heritage worth the nine cents per day for membership in an organization dedicated to preserving what our grandparents held so dear? Will you give a gift of membership to another family member? Will you consider giving a gift of money to help preserve DANK? No gift is too small and remember even pennies add up! Perhaps you will consider remembering DANK in your will. You may ask, "What will I get in return?" Besides membership in an organization that values the preservation of our heritage, you help to leave a legacy of pride in having Germanic roots.

Right now, the future of DANK is up to you. You can chose to ignore the pleas for support; you can say I've paid my dues, BUT if you turn your back, then remember when you gather family around, after you depart this earth, you leave them nothing but your name. Gone will be the pride in your heritage because no one stepped forward to see the future.

In Munich the Starkbierfest 'strong beer festival' takes place during Lent, While Lent is normally thought of as a time to reflect and to fast, the fasting was a bit too much for the Bavarian monks. Craving something a bit heavier and more substantial during their fast, they came up with an officially sanctioned fasting loophole, Starkbier, which they actually referred to as 'liquid bread'. As beer is a drink after all, why not just drink a heartier version of it in great quantities to fight back those hunger pangs?

Meeting – Wed. the 17th

Lenten Traditions: - Why do Bavarians eat donuts before Lent begins?

The answer to this question goes back to the religious meaning behind Mardi Gras and Lent. The Tuesday before Lent is about getting ready to fast (which is why it is called Fasching or Fastnacht in Bavaria) and to give up meat and fatty foods, for example. The word carnival itself has to do with “carne” or “meat”, so the meaning is similar; Mardi Gras means “fat Tuesday” in French, also referring to fasting during Lent. Basically, the period leading up to Mardi Gras or Faschingsdienstag (Shrove Tuesday) is an excuse to revel in excesses before giving them up. And that’s where the donuts come in. In other words, a perfect food to enjoy before going on your Lenten fast would be donuts! Donuts are, after all, cooked in hot oil. In one part of Germany, they’re called Krapfen. Yes, go ahead and giggle – the word sounds funny in English.

The pretzel is a traditional Lenten bread that in the Roman Empire maintained a strict fast butter, cheese, eggs, cream, and meat. In the late when he wrote to Augustine of Canterbury from flesh, meat, and from all things that come to preserve strength throughout the day, people middle of the afternoon with smaller snacks need for a simple food that met abstinence and fasting concerns.

dates back to the early 4th century. Christians during Lent that excluded from their diet milk, 6th century, Pope Gregory confirmed this regarding dietary rules in Lent: “We abstain from flesh, as milk, cheese and eggs.” In order would eat one meal in the evening or in the throughout the day. The pretzel fulfilled the

By making breads of water, flour, and salt, early Christians were reminded of the penitential nature of Lent and fasting. By shaping the bread in the form of crossed arms, they were also reminded of prayer. The Latin word for “little arms” is bracellae. Eventually invading German tribes corrupted the Latin to “brezel” or “prezel.”

From medieval times, the people of Germany, Austria, and Poland introduced pretzels annually on Ash Wednesday. In addition to giving out pretzels to the poor during Lent, other traditions include hanging pretzels from palm branches on Palm Sunday. Despite the fact that pretzels are now readily available throughout the year, there are still places in Europe that only serve pretzels from Ash Wednesday to Easter in keeping with the former symbolism.

A fifth century manuscript contains the earliest picture and description of the pretzel.
